

EC 210

Mini Project 1

Prof. Santetti

Fall 2024

INSTRUCTIONS: It is still quite early in the semester, and we have many topics to cover. However, this first Mini Project's purpose is to explore your growing (macro)economic perceptions.

Inspired by this Washington Post article, you are asked to evaluate how your hometown's economy has dealt (and has been dealing, if applicable) with the COVID-19 pandemic.

It is extremely likely that this crisis has affected its economy in some way, and in this assignment you will evaluate that from a macroeconomic perspective.

Talk to people, consult local newspapers and/or the local news, and critically evaluate how the last four years have affected your town's employment, migration and population, businesses, or whatever other aspects that you see fit for the purposes of our course.

How you will turn in this assignment is up to you. In other words, you may record a video, a podcast, an interview, or write an essay. We all have preferred ways of expressing ourselves, so choose your favorite format.

- As having feedback prior to submitting an assignment is usually helpful, students will submit a draft/early-ish version of their Projects by 09/24 (Tu). Feedback will be provided by anonymous peer-reviewing. A separate Canvas assignment is available for this purpose. Here are some helpful guidelines for a successful student peer-reviewing process. Failing to submit drafts for peer review and/or failing to provide feedback will result in point deductions.
- In order to keep the reviewing process blind and anonymous, do not include your name in your draft submission.

Let us set some limits:

- Video: max. 10 minutes;
- Podcast/Interview: max. 15 minutes;
- Essay: 3–5 pages, double-spaced.

The most relevant thing from this assignment is for you to evaluate how a macroeconomic event can have local effects. This way, analyzing your hometown can make it easier. Concentrate on the stories, not so much on theoretical rigor!

→ Draft submissions due Sep. 24 (Tu). Peer reviews due Sep. 26 (Th), before class.

→ Assignment due Oct. 3 (Th), before class.

→ Submissions on Canvas.

→ Points Possible: 20

- Be honest. Don't cheat.
- You are more intelligent than any artificially-made prompt.
- Have fun. The process should be rewarding, not a burden.

QUICK RUBRIC:

- Brief demographic information/description about your town/county (e.g., location, population size, average income, main economic activities, etc., if available): 5 points;
- Using and mentioning official sources of information (e.g., news articles, town/county official websites, official databases, transcribed statements from consulted individuals, etc.): 5 points;
- Relating the pandemic crisis with the local economy (how businesses dealt with it, how unemployment numbers have changed, migratory changes, supply chain issues, etc.): 5 points;
- Explicitly referencing your sources by the end of your essay (keep these in a separate page—it will not count as an essay page): 5 points.
 - Please don't use lengthy URL links for your references. Wrap them in text (see a quick tutorial)